HOUSES STRUCK IN FREAK STORM

Electrical Visitation in Middle of Winter Causes Damage at Biglerville.

TOWN STREET LAMPS OUT

Gettysburg Gets its Share of Trouble in Wind during Night. People Have Narrow Escapes.

Two residences in Biglerville were struck and slightly damaged in a mid-winter electrical storm which passed over Adams County on Friday evening. No one was hurt but occupants of the houses had narrow escapes.

The residence of Waybright Rice in the northern part of Biglerville was somewhat damaged when lightning, following the rainstorm to a point about four feet from the ground, was deflected and entered a corner of the kitchen, shattering the drying board at the sink, scattering dishes about, and breaking a number of them.

Mr. and Mrs. Rice were in the room at the time and, although badly frightened, were apparently unhurt. Mr. Rice was afraid that the house might be fired and hurrying out, summoned help by waving a lantern. Neighbors responded and a search was made but no fire was found.

The residence of Charles Osborne in the southern portion of the town was also struck. The bolt here spent itself on the roof and part of the chimney, both of which were damaged. The family escaped any harm.

The storm came with very little warning. It was about half past five o'clock when the first flash of lightning was followed quickly by thunder. At intervals of a few minutes this unusual February visitation continued to play for a half hour over the northern and western parts of the county, and immediately over Gettysburg. Then it swung to the south and Littlestown was the storm-center for a time. It then passed on to Maryland. About ten o'clock a wind started in Gettysburg and shortly afterward every street light went out, the result of short circuits caused by wires rubbing against trees. This morning it was necessary to replace every bulb in the town.

A number of parts of the county had practically no storm at all but the rain was quite general.

MARKET VERY STRONG

Especially in Certain Issues. Motors Leading.

(By Associated Press) New York, Feb. 15—Stocks opened with a firm tone to-day, the market soon becoming active and decidedly stronger on another broad demand for oils, shipping and some of motors. Rails were contrary to the general trend for a time because of a pronounced weakness in St. Paul, but made appreciable gains later.

Pan-American Petroleum, common and preferred, made from four to eight points respectively. Marine preferred and American International Corporation rose three points each, General Motors four and Stutz Motors three.

Leading equipment stocks went up one to one and one-half points. The closing was strong. Sales totalled 400,000 shares.

SAVANNAH'S BIG LOSS

Part of it Said to be Without Insurance.

(By Associated Press) Savannah, Feb. 15—A pile of smoking ruins, approximately five city blocks long and 200 feet wide, to-day marked the path of the fire which swept Hutchinson's Island in the Savannah River here yesterday while the damage is estimated in millions.

No accurate estimate of the financial loss can be made it was stated to-day until after a checking up. The damage was well covered by insurance on all property privately owned but it is said that there was no insurance on the wharves, docks, and railroad properties controlled by the government.

CLAIMS MORE OF STOLEN BLANKETS

Little of Loot Taken to Rob Post Office now Remains. No Arrests.

The identity of the two remaining blankets used in the Hanover Post Office robbery last week, has been established. Edward Alden, a farmer who lives a mile north of Manchester, Md., and whose farm lies along the Baltimore pike, went to Hanover Thursday evening and proved they were his property.

They were stolen from his buggy in the barn on the farm, quite likely on the night of the robbery. This cannot be determined as Mr. Alden did not use the buggy from February 2nd until the 12th, and only discovered his loss Wednesday. He went to Hanover at once and found that the blankets were the ones he had missed.

Mr. Alden did not see nor hear anyone prowling about his property on the night of the post office robbery. The family had retired early and are all sound sleepers.

The tools, the blankets, and other articles in connection with the robbery have all been identified by their owners with one exception—the still-stolen wrench, which is still unclaimed.

Detective work is probably progressing in a very quiet way, and nothing as to the movement of, or plans or methods pursued, aside from those given out in Hanover are to be had.

The Adams County Farm Bureau has arranged for a series of meetings throughout the county this coming week.

A. A. Borland, a dairy expert from Pennsylvania State College, will be on hand to give talks on various dairy subjects. The question of forming a cow testing association in Adams County will take a great deal of Mr. Borland's time.

These associations have proved so successful in building up the dairy herds in other parts of the state that there has been a demand for the formation of such an association here. The following meetings have been arranged to which everyone is invited:

February 18 Gettysburg, Tuesday evening, 7:30, Court House.

February 19 East Berlin, Wednesday evening 7:30, Cemetery School House.

TEACHERS GATHER IN WINTER RALLY

Three Associations in Separate Conferences during the Morning at High School.

ONE AFTERNOON MEETING

Several Speakers to Address Convention. Teachers themselves Give Views of Problems.

Adams County's public school teachers went into conference to-day to discuss the problems confronting them and to listen for a time to the lecturers here to speak on practical topics. It was the annual mid-winter rally at which the teachers for a time became pupils.

During the morning separate conferences were held in the High School building in three rooms. At the first of these the Principals' Association had a prepared program; at another the Rural Teachers' Association were in session; and at a third the Primary Teachers' Association met. Dr. Lee Driver and State Inspector Dennison visited all three conferences and assisted the teachers in thrashing out their problems.

The Principals' Association had the following program: "English as a Stepping Stone to the Difficulties of the Foreign Languages," Miss Elsie Garlach and Miss Ruth McIlheny; "Community Civics and Practical Citizenship," Prof. George M. Rice and Prof. C. E. Tawney; "What to Do with the Pupil who is Able but Unwilling, and with the Pupil who is not Able but Willing," a round table discussion led by Prof. Roy D. Knouse.

The Rural Teachers' Association had a general discussion on topics particularly affecting their work; and the Primary Association devoted their attention specially to the subjects of "Penmanship" and "Spelling."

This afternoon all three associations met as a body for a half-day institute at which Dr. Driver and Mr. Dennison made addresses. These men also appeared a number of times before the school directors' convention earlier in the week and in their addresses to-day continued their work toward the betterment of the school system.

The attendance of teachers was very good, trains and automobiles bringing a goodly number of them here for the mid-winter meeting.

SAVED YANKS' LIVES

Disease Did not Take the Number Killed in Action.

(By Associated Press)

Washington, Feb. 15—The battle death rates in the American army during the great war exceeded the death rate from disease. General March announced to-day. In past wars, disease killed many more men than lost their lives under fire.

The battle death rate for the entire American army in this war was twenty per thousand per year. In the expeditionary forces it was fifty seven per thousand per year. The disease death rate was seventeen per thousand per year in the expeditionary forces, and sixteen in the army at home.

Among the American forces, the tables showed, the battle death rate was only half that of the British expeditionary forces which was given as 110 per thousand per year. General March said that the lower death rate from disease undoubtedly was due to the inoculation requirements of the army, and secondly to the efficient work of the medical corps. But for the influenza epidemic, he said, the disease rate would have been cut in half.

NEXT MATTER IN HAND

(By Associated Press) Paris, Feb. 15—With the subject of the League of Nations now out of the way for some time to come, the biggest problem before the Peace Conference at present will be the readjustment of the world's financial and economic relations. Three different organizations have been created to deal with the subject. Some of their conclusions are ready for consideration as soon as the conference is willing to receive the report.

(By Associated Press) Brest, Feb. 15—President Wilson left here on his return to the United States on board the United States steamer "George Washington" shortly after 11 o'clock this morning. The "George Washington" weighed anchor at 11:15.

When President Wilson left here to-day it was announced that he would land in Boston on February 25, where he was expected to make an address which would cover the work performed at the Peace Conference. It was said most probable that the President would make another speech before returning to Washington.

In a farewell to the French people before leaving to-day President Wilson said he had been received and treated as a friend, as he had most desired to be treated. He added that he would be happy to return to France to assist in completing the just settlement at the peace conference.

Atlantic City, Feb. 15—In a cablegram received to-day by Joseph P. Tumulty, secretary to the President, who is staying at a prominent hotel here, President Wilson announced his decision to deliver an address at Boston immediately upon his arrival in this country.

President Wilson will speak in Boston at a meeting arranged for by the mayor, and the "George Washington" bearing the President and Mrs. Wilson will make port at Boston on the return trip to America.

It is expected that the voyage of the "George Washington" will take about nine days.

SNAGS HINDERED WORLD LEAGUE

Some of the Delegates Held out for Balance of Power. Doubted Efficiency.

SKEPTICS ARE WON OVER

Wanted Old Order Maintained until
New System had Demonstrated its Entire Practicability.

Paris, Feb. 15.—Now that the project for the creation of a League of Nations, which was the principal object of the gathering of representatives of most of the states which are not in arms against the Entente has been successfully launched, it may be proper to tell of some of the difficulties encountered and to indicate the status of some of the great issues remaining to be adjusted by the Peace Conference.

While there was unanimity as to the desirability of a League of Nations, it soon developed that some of the delegates, skeptical of its immediate efficiency, desired to maintain the old order of balances of power and protected frontiers until the new system had demonstrated its capacity to meet the needs of peace-loving nations. Patient endeavor and many long sessions of the Supreme Council itself, and afterward of the special commission created to deal with the subject, were necessary to establish to the satisfaction of these threatened dissenters the impossibility of continuing the old order while installing the new.

In fact, it was only within the last week that the difficulties facing the League of Nations were overcome, although with some misgivings, it is true. The doubting nations were induced to try the experiment of relying upon the honor and common interest of the other nations to insure the success of the project. Then there was the difference over the question of mandates for backward peoples. Rather heated arguments developed at times, but these differences also were adjusted with unanimity in the end.

Various big issues presented themselves, some of which were skillfully diverted to commissions which are to report afterward to the League of Nations, while others were rather suddenly disappeared in the light of the development of the plan for the League of Nations.

Of such was the vexed question of freedom of the seas, which jeopardized the support of Great Britain. It was realized that with a perfect League of Nations there would be no neutrals, and that consequently no questions could arise as to freedom of the seas in time of war, while in time of peace equitable relations between nations were guaranteed by special provisions of the covenant.

Finally, after these discussions were over, it can be stated that no hard feelings remained. There was absolute unanimity so far as the special commission was concerned; that those nations which at first had doubted the efficiency of the project, came out of the discussions as its firmest advocates.

Looking to the future, the special commission attaches most importance to the provision made for the admission to the league of neutrals or late enemy states. The latter are known to be anxious to adhere, but the commission has taken every precaution to make sure that they enter with proper motives and prepared to live up to the obligations of the league. The point was made that such admission should be encouraged, as it was highly desirable, having at heart the interest of the whole world, that the industries of late enemy states and neutral countries which suffered from the blockade be set in motion at the earliest possible moment.

This decision was not based upon sympathy for Germany, but upon the absolute conviction that the safety of continental Europe, and perhaps of the whole world, depended upon turning the German population into ways of industry, so that it might be able to produce goods to pay off the enormous indemnities to be imposed upon it. It was the conviction that otherwise Germany might soon drift into the condition of Russia, and that there would be no responsible government with which the peace treaty could be concluded. In that case it would be necessary for the Peace Congress to continue indefinitely in existence, awaiting the social and economic reorganization that might follow an era of Bolshevism, lasting perhaps for years.

The procedure to be followed by the subcommissions on responsibility for the war was discussed at the Department of the Interior Friday morning. The subcommissions are three in number. One will investigate the "criminal facts," another responsibility for the war, and the third, violations of the laws of war. All three will meet next week.

MILLIONS LOST IN SAVANNAH BLAZE

Large Part of Seaboard Air Line
Terminals and Chemical Plant Destroyed.

Savannah, Ga., Feb. 15.—Fed by large quantities of rosin and turpentine, fire late yesterday destroyed the plant of the Southern Fertilizer and Chemical Company and burned a swath three city blocks long and about 200 feet wide through the terminals of the Seaboard Air Line Railroad on Hutchinson Island with a loss estimated in millions of dollars.

Cotton, naval stores, sugar, lumber and nitrate of soda added to the intensity of the flames, which were gotten under control after five hours of fighting by the combined forces of the railroad company and city, aided by fire tugs. The efforts of the firemen were hindered by a thick suffocating smoke arising from burning rosin and turpentine and by a wind which reached almost gale proportions.

The fire, the origin of which has not been determined, was discovered in the railroad terminal at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and quickly spread to the fertilizer plant. By 8 o'clock last night, when it was announced the flames were under control, a long section had been burned through the terminal. Fire walls prevented the fire spreading to the general docks, but the flames leaped over the walls on the naval stores and lumber wharves.

Railroad officials are now unable to estimate the loss to the terminals and materials stored there. With the fertilizer plant more than 30 freight cars loaded with nitrate of soda and other fertilizer materials were destroyed. The nitrate of soda burned was valued at $1,500,000.

The terminal is located across the Savannah river from the business section of the city.

Paris, Feb. 15.—Colonel Carl Boyd, principal aide-de-camp to General J. J. Pershing, is dead, after an attack of pneumonia. His home was Adamsville, Ga., and for a number of years he was military attaché of the American embassy here.

The death of Colonel Boyd removes from the staff of General Pershing one of its best known members. As personal aide ever since the general came to France, Colonel Boyd accompanied him everywhere. He was present at all the great councils and conferences with the Allied commanders-in-chief and enjoyed General Pershing's confidence and friendship to the highest degree. His fluent knowledge of French made him invaluable as a personal aide.

LIME NOT UP TO LAW

State Report Makes Criticisms Following the Analyses.

Results of the 1918 inspection of lime sold in Pennsylvania for agricultural purposes were of such a character as to cause James W. Kellogg, the chief chemist of the department, to declare in a report to the secretary of agriculture that "nearly one half of the samples received contained less calcium oxide than guaranteed, thus indicating need of greater care in labeling and guaranteeing these products in order to comply with the requirements of the law." The deficiencies are reported to have been more numerous in the samples of hydrated lime than in the other classes.

SCHEIDEMANN IS WEIMAR VICTOR

Wins Assembly as he Elaborates on Germany's New Policy.
Stirs Gathering.

WILSON PROGRAM PRAISED

Efforts of Radicals to Interrupt Proposition is Blocked by Representatives of Other Parties.

Weimar, Feb. 15.—Philipp Scheidemann, chancellor in the new provisional government, speaking in the National Assembly Wednesday, elaborated upon the government's recent statement of its policy. His speech was an effective one and the representatives of all the parties in the assembly, from Right to Left, listened to him attentively and for the most part sympathetically. The Independent Socialists from time to time interrupted the speaker with sarcastic remarks or laughed derisively, but the remainder of the house was in no temper to listen to these interruptions and there were many who joined in the frequent attempts to repress them by free use of the sibilant sound. This hushing process was particularly directed against one of the Independent Socialist women members.

Herr Scheidemann gained the greatest applause when he declared President Wilson's program had been wholly accepted by the government and by reference he made to the retention by the Allies of the German prisoners. He sharply attacked the advocates of a minority dictatorship, upon whom he laid all the blame for all the bloodshed in the early days of the German revolution. The Independent Socialists who entered the cabinet were, said Scheidemann, "cursed with inherited sin against the spirit of democracy."

An interruption by the Independents at this point was drowned by the applause from the remainder of the house, while at other times the speaker's utterances were liberally applauded.

Want Colonies Restored

Basel, Switzerland, Feb. 15.—Addressing the National Assembly at Weimar, Philipp Scheidemann, the chancellor, said the first essential of the government's policy was the maintenance of unity in the nation by means of a strong central authority. The immediate restoration of peace came next, which should be secured by adherence to the program of President Wilson and the rejection of a peace of violence. The program, he said, called for the restoration of the German colonies and the admission of Germany to the League of Nations with equal rights.

After reference to other points in the program as it related to foreign affairs, the chancellor outlined the domestic and economic ideas of the government. There would be a considerable reduction of the period of service in the new army to be created, and the troops now in barracks, including the 1899 class, would be demobilized.

Many reforms were planned, the chancellor explained, including better sanitation and housing, protective measures for the young, the regulation of supply and demand in labor and the development of agriculture. War profits would be confiscated to carry out these reforms, while the tax on incomes of more than a certain amount would be doubled and a tax on large fortunes would be levied for the purpose of scaling down the national debt.

Look To Wilson

"The era of world domination is over," said the chancellor at one point in his speech, "and no power can, without let or hindrance, risk the violation of the equal political rights of all."

Urging the maintenance of the Wilson program, the chancellor said that if that program were followed Germany would be the fatherland of all who desired to be Germans, and that they would be free Germans. Germany trampled under foot, however, would be as dangerous to all the peoples of the world as the Pan-Germans had been.

Regarding the co-operation of the nation as a whole with the individual states the chancellor declared himself in favor of the principle of unity in liberty.

SHARP RESIGNS HIS PARIS POST

Again Reported that Vance Mc-Cormick, Chairman Democratic Committee may Succeed.

Washington, Feb. 15.—President Wilson has accepted the resignation of William Graves Sharp as Ambassador to France to take effect when a successor qualifies. This was revealed by correspondence between the President and the Ambassador, made public last night at the White House without comment.

There was no information in official circles as to whom the President had in mind for the Paris post, but at the time the resignation of Vance McCormick, as chairman of the Democratic National Committee, was made known by the Associated Press last month it was said that Mr. McCormick would become Ambassador to France.

Mr. McCormick is now in Paris, having been summoned there by the President more than a month ago for work in connection with the Peace Conference. When he left Washington he told friends that he expected this work would occupy him for several months at least.

Mr. Sharp's letter to the President, made public last night, was under date of December 19 and revealed that he had first asked to be relieved immediately after the signing of the armistice, his resignation to become effective before the end of 1918. This request was more formally renewed in the letter of December 19 and brought a reply from the President under date of December 21 accepting the resignation and asking that Mr. Sharp remain at Paris until his successor could qualify. This Mr. Sharp has agreed to do.

GREAT STRIKE IN BERLIN

20,000 Employees of Department
Stores now Out.

Berlin, Feb. 15.—The big department stores and specialty shops in Central Berlin, whose packing and delivery forces are on strike, attempted to remain open Wednesday, but were forced to close by the strikers. The shops were entered by the strikers, who dispersed the shoppers and induced the clerks to join the walk-out. Virtually every shop in Leipzigerstrasse is closed, and late Wednesday afternoon the strikers were parading the downtown streets and holding open-air meetings. No untoward incidents have been reported.

The employers and the arbitration court met again to adjust the wage demands of the strikers. Twenty thousand employees are on strike.

After visiting the grave Mrs. Roosevelt will go to Italy to visit her sister, Miss Emily Carow. Mrs. Roosevelt was quite tired after a stormy voyage.

GERMANS TUNNELED ROME

Washington, Feb. 15.—A dispatch to the State Department from Rome yesterday announcing that the Italian government had taken possession of the site of the German Embassy, the Palazzo Caffarelli, and the brain. He was alone in his bed-room demolishing the building, said it had been discovered that the Germans had tunneled from the embassy, been in impaired health since last winter Capitol Hill up to the Victor Emmanuel monument.

AL H. WILSON

Al H. Wilson, America's entertainer and singing comedian, will hold forth at the Lincoln Way Theatre for matinee and evening performances on Saturday, February 15th, as the central character in a new stirring song-play "Once Upon a Time." This new Wilson offering of mirth, music and drama is by Rachel Crothers, who also wrote such successes as "Old Lady 31," "Three of Us" etc., and is said to be a play that will carry the genial Al H. Wilson on to greater success. The action is replete with new songs introduced at intervals by Mr. Wilson entitled "I Want You Then Macchree," "Wilson's Lullaby," "My Little Climbing Rose," "My Irish Song of Songs," "Once Upon a Time," and other Wilson favorites.

The scale of prices will be 25, 50, 75 and $1.00 for the matinee, while the evening prices start at 50 and go to $1.50.—advertisement

LUTHERANS WILL START CAMPAIGN

Open Effort here and throughout Country to Get Fund for Reconstruction.

To-morrow from 10,000 Lutheran pupils in the United States will be presented the appeal of the National Lutheran Council for funds for overseas reconstruction work. February 16th marks the opening day of the campaign.

The day is designated as a day of worship and prayer for the campaign, in every Lutheran church participating. All the pastors have been requested to base their sermons on the appeal of the church's reconstruction service. Appropriate music for choir and congregation and other features have been suggested and provided for the occasion.

The campaign is being conducted by the National Lutheran Council, the reconstruction service agency of all Lutherans, except the Synodical Conference.

The purpose for which the funds are to be used are: helping the Lutherans of France, Finland, the Balkans, and providing for religious service in industrial centers in the United States.

The task abroad, it is stated, actually means the reorganization of the Lutheran Church of Europe along democratic lines of the American Lutheran Church. A commission of six is to be sent over at once to get in touch with the situation.

To Remove Grease.

The following method, described in Popular Science Monthly, has been substituted for the use of gasoline and other light oils: Boil the parts in caustic soda lye; one pound to a gallon of water; then brush while the articles are hot. Caustic soda is recommended as better than ordinary soda, since it causes the fat or grease to dissolve more quickly.

Cruise Overlooked a Bet.

That Robinson Crusoe, in spite of his well known resourcefulness, overlooked a fine business opportunity is shown by the fact that the island of his adventures, Man-a-Tierra off the coast of Juan Fernandez crop of the coast of Chile, is now to be sent of a large lobster-canning industry. Crusoe seemed to think he was doing remarkably well to pick up the necessities of life on that island—and most of them were washed ashore from a wreck at that time—but his modern inhabitants do a rushing business in the export of luxuries.

The Profitable Nickel.

Like the humble cent, the increased coinage of which was recently mentioned in this column, the nickel is in greater demand than ever. That is fortunate, for the face value of those "token coins" is so much greater than the value of the metal they contain that the profit in manufacturing them, together with a slight profit in manufacturing the minor silver coins, more than meets the entire running expenses of the mint.—Youth's Companion.

The Lucky Horseshoe.

The superstitious use of horseshoes as emblems of good luck originated in England in the seventeenth century. They were at first deemed a protection against witches and evil spirits, and were nailed on doors of houses with the curve, uppermost. The custom of nailing horseshoes to ships and other sailing craft is still in vogue.

WANT UNITED STATES TO TAKE ON SOME OF GERMAN COLONIES

Feeling in England That America Should Discard Her Traditional Aloofness and Assume Administration of Part of Captured Lands—New Form of Colonial Control Is Being Advocated.

By LLOYD ALLEN,
Special Staff Correspondent.
(Copyright, Western Newspaper Union.)

London.—"Will America be willing to take on some of the German colonies or Turkish possessions in the near East?"

That is a question that is uppermost in the minds of a large section of the governing class of England. Men who have led British political thought for years believe that we "should assume some of the responsibility of governing the lands captured from the Germans and Turks," as one leading British publicist told me recently. There is a double reason back of this idea.

First of all, America is an English-speaking nation that can be trusted to administer wisely and well the destinies of a less-enlightened people.

Division of Colonies.

At this stage of the peace negotiations the question of dividing the colonies is a matter on which no public man is anxious to go on record. But unofficially the subject is attracting wide attention. Too many interests are involved to invite outspoken discussion. There are larger problems that must first be solved: The limitation of armaments, freedom of the seas and above all other subjects, formation of a league of nations. Once these are disposed of the colonial knot will probably be quickly cut.

It is with implicit faith in the ultimate outcome of these basic affairs that the intelligent Briton outlines his belief that America, if she is to remain as a leading factor in world politics, must go into the colony business.

Should such a course be embarked on by the United States, should we take, for instance, the administration of Palestine and Armenia and possibly some of the former German lands in South Africa, it would be put on the same platform that the best elements in England accept for India: namely, that sooner or later India will develop into a dominion capable of self-government, like Canada and Australia, and must then be given every freedom to determine her own destiny.

The same principles would apply to the subject African states—ultimate freedom to choose whether or not the ties that bind to the mother country must be cut, or allowed to remain.

Answerable to League of Nations.

Through all the days of American administration—and it is admitted many of these days would prove irksome and expensive—America would be answerable to the league of nations for her actions in the territory held in trust, just as the other European powers, England, France and Italy, will be answerable to the league of nations for any maladministration of subject peoples.

In brief, intelligent England is recommending for world consideration a new form of colonial control, with the feeling that the world has outgrown the days when a Spanish tyrant could terrorize Cuba, or a brutalized German government could commit atrocities in South Africa.

There is in America a somewhat general belief that the average British citizen takes great pride in the large colonial possessions of his country; that he glories with much satisfaction over the fact that Great Britain controls something like one-quarter of the inhabitable portions of the world.

Our ideas on this subject are not exactly correct. There is a large element in the citizenship of this country that is dead against the proposal to acquire any more territorial possessions. In fact, among the Labor party, which is showing unusual strength these days, there is a firm conviction that India must soon be allowed to say what her government shall be.

Problems to Be Solved.

Here we have another side of the problem that many predict will be solved by providing for enlightenment of the uncivilized colonial peoples, and by introducing into colonial government a number of reforms—prohibition of the sale of alcohol to natives, first of all, and next the establishment of welfare departments calculated to better the living conditions of the natives.

Much effort is being expended here in England to start fundamental reforms in the attitude toward the colonies. Booklets are being issued and are just off the press. One entitled "Windows of Freedom" carries an introduction by Viscount Grey.

"America's Place in World Government" is given considerable space. It is strongly pointed out that "none of the territories outside Europe detached by this war from the German and Turkish empires can in the near future provide peace, order and good government for themselves. How to provide government for these territories is the most difficult of the questions which the conference has to face. From a hundred lips and pens the answer will come that the solution lies in international control. The league of nations will solve the problem."

The booklet then emphasizes that the league of nations, in itself, cannot provide actual government for the colonies; that government must be furnished by one of the associated powers, acting in a way as agent for the league of nations and of course responsible to the league.

Freedom Is Secured.

"The control of the four continents has fallen, or is now falling, to the free peoples of the earth," the booklet with the Viscount Grey introduction states, and by that control the existence of freedom is secured, not only in Europe, but also in America and Australia.

"But what is the effect of this victory to be on Asia, Africa and the scattered remnants of primitive society who inhabit a hundred Pacific isles? In the end the effect must be that they, too, will achieve the art of governing themselves. But the question, how soon can the end be reached, depends on a right understanding by the free nations who now control the world of the delicate and complex nature of the problem. Failure to grasp it will not only delay the end but may yet set the civilized world by the ears," in brief, may yet form the grounds for another war.

Injected into this idea is a strong plea for the utmost fairness in exploiting the territorial natural resources, which must not be considered the property of any one nation, but must be open to all.

There is no sentiment expressed in the publications now being issued on the colonial problem against any feature of the fourteen points laid down in President Wilson's peace declaration. Instead, there is shown an effort to make these points harmonize with the arguments advanced for American participation in colonial government.

What Wilson Said.

President Wilson's fifth clause, in the notable fourteen points, asks for "A free, open-minded and absolutely impartial adjustment of all colonial claims based upon a strict observance of the principle that in determining all such questions of sovereignty the interests of the populations concerned must have equal weight with the equitable claims of the government whose title is to be determined."

The whole point at issue, according to this recently published British view, is that no government shall claim exclusive title to the captured lands, but that one government must take the responsibility of administration and be responsible in turn to an international tribunal.

Clause twelve of the president's peace terms provide for the lopping off of Armenia and Palestine from Turkey and insist that these one-time subject states shall "be assured an undoubted security of life and an absolutely unmolested opportunity of an autonomous development," which opportunity, it is pointed out here, would most assuredly be provided were America acting as a kind of big brother to the Armenians and people of Palestine.

Want America to Take Hold.

There is hope here among the most far-seeing British thinkers that America will discard her traditional aloofness and become custodian of the Armenians, of Palestine, and take charge even of the Dardanelles, maintaining an open-door policy, a policy the British will undoubtedly strongly urge on the French and Italian governments as an expedient in wise territorial government.

It is even being urged that we take over the task of preserving the autonomy of Persia and Arabia.

That America possesses knowledge for handling such a large assignment is undoubted. It is pointed out that Roberts college and the American missions in the near East have given us a preponderant share. If not a monopoly, of public-spirited men, many of them natives of this section of the world who consequently have first-hand knowledge of these regions.

Incidentally, from the near East, America could promote railroad construction without offense to the British, and could assist in that most vexatious problem of the day, the restoration of Russia, the blind giant among nations, the Grey booklet says.

Why Diamond Is Prized.

Of practical uses the diamond is not quite destitute—it is, for instance, the best of all abrasives—but these practical uses have almost or quite nothing to do with its popular esteem. That rests first on the poor claims established by cost and scarcity, and second, on the survival in human beings of the ancient and savage delight in hanging about and fastening to the body bits of stone and metal that are brightly colored or shiny.

AWES MARINES WITH MOTOR

Circus Performer Acting as Instructor Makes Tricks Look Simple. Many a marine rookie has stripped his gears trying to do "setting up" exercises under an instructor who was formerly a professional contortionist. Sergeant Joe Mader, who is instructor and motor vehicle expert of the Third company of the signal battalion of marines at Philadelphia, was out on the parade grounds recently giving a raw class a few tips on how to ride a motorcycle. For a while he contented himself with riding across the area with his machine listing at an angle of 50 degrees. Then he raised the front wheel off the ground and rode that way. Turning his machine with an acuteness that skidded him all the way around he started on the return trip. As he approached the awestricken class he stood up on the seat of the motorcycle and, waving his arms in the semaphore code, signalled, "That's all there is to it."

But later they found out that he used to ride around the walls of a tank in a circus sideshow.

Wheels of Locomotive Built by Stephenson for First Railroad in Maine Are to Be Preserved.

Waterville, Me.—On the lawn of the home of Col. Frederick E. Boothby, for many years general passenger agent of the Maine Central railroad, is the wheels of the tender of the first locomotive of the first railroad in Maine—the Bangor, Oldtown & Orano railway, better known as the "Teazle Railroad." The wheels are of oak, with a half-inch iron tire and iron flange. The original engine was called the Pioneer and was imported from England, where it was built by Stephenson. The wheels of the tender were found recently in a junk shop and were turned over to Colonel Boothby.

ASK QUICK RETURN TO OLD CONDITIONS

PEOPLE TELLING CONGRESSMEN THE WAR RESTRICTIONS AND PRICES SHOULD END.

STATES WANT THEIR TROOPS

Demand for the Restoration of the National Guard Will Be General—Martin Dies Says Things About Cashing War Loans.

BY ARTHUR W. DUNN.

Washington.—Debates in congress seem to echo a certain amount of discontent throughout the country, voicing a feeling of dissatisfaction and unrest. People who bore all and everything for the sake of making the war a success are somewhat annoyed because war conditions and war prices continue and because there is not a swift return to pre-war conditions. That such dissatisfaction is felt throughout the country is shown by the letters that have been received by public men from every section. That accounts for much of the severe criticism that has been heard, as well as the demand in congress for a speedy return to normal conditions in the country.

When the time comes for settling the status of this country in a military way there will be a great demand for the restoration of the National Guard, that is, the old state troops as they were before they were taken into the national army for the purpose of fighting Germany. A few years ago every body was for "nationalizing" the National Guard. Now there is a demand for the restoration of the state regiments. One reason for this demand is the fact that local color in the army is a very wholesome thing. People are proud of what their states and sections contribute in the way of organizations rather than of individual men. There is pride in New England over what New England troops did and various states and communities point with pride to the achievements of their state regiments and their local companies and organizations. So far as possible the national army that was sent to Europe was kept in local units and hence we heard about the gallantry of troops from this state or that state.

Martin Dies of Texas, who frequently makes pertinent remarks, took enough time of the house the other day to express his views of a certain class of critics in the country. These critics have been assailing as little better than deserters people who cash in their war savings stamps or sell their liberty bonds. The Texas congressman remarked that as the house had just passed a bill appropriating $500,000,000 for charity, and the postmaster general says we are about to buy ten telegrams and telephones, and others are advocating that we spend $200,000,000 or more in buying the railways and houses are being provided in Washington for those who hold government jobs he thought it was about time to call a halt on the criticism of those people who found it necessary to sell their government obligations. If the government can afford to be so lavish with its money it can afford to redeem its obligations, was his conclusion.

Washington.—After the president fights for and gets what he wants in the peace conference he will have to come back to this country and fight for the ratification of the treaty which he has negotiated. It is well known that many of the points which the president has contended for at the peace table have been grudgingly granted and at the same time it is plainly apparent that many things which the president has been contending for at the peace table are anything but satisfactory to a number of senators who will finally pass upon the treaty.

The league of nations, if it is an organization with any power and force, will meet with strong opposition, because the sentiment of a number of the men who will have to vote upon the treaty is against any "entangling alliances" with foreign governments, further than merely a moral understanding to prevent war. But still stronger opposition develops to the idea of having the league of nations of which the United States is a part undertaking the government of vast lands which were formerly German colonies. There are men in this country who hesitate about embarking in any such enterprise. There is no politics in the opposition thus far developed, as men on both sides of the party aisle are supporting and opposing the president's policies.

A year from now the nation will be in the throes of a presidential campaign. By that time the national committees will have met and chosen the cities for the next national conventions and fixed the dates of such conventions. That in itself starts politics humming. But even if it is a year before the national committees assemble for that purpose there is still a great deal of talk going on about various presidential candidates. Just now Senator Harding of Ohio is getting more prominence for the Republican nomination than almost any other man. For some reason or other the press notices of Harding appear more frequently than those of any other possibility. In fact, he is being boosted in the real Ohio way. When Ohio has an opportunity to get a president she goes out after the place without any hesitancy.

The time was, many years ago, when Senator Eugene Hale of Maine, father of the present Senator Hale of that state, was the real gnom of the senate. He was forever making dire predictions. He said in the demand for an increased army and navy danger to American institutions. The war with Spain and the acquisition of the Philippines he regarded as a step in the direction of imperialism and the destruction of our system of government. The legitimate successor of Eugene Hale in the senate is Charles S. Thomas of Colorado. His ingenuities have become very pronounced. Like Hale, he sees danger in the vast expenditures of the government. The growth of office-holding, the far-reaching influence of militarism, the spread of anarchism, and many other things cause the Colorado senator to rise in his place and solemnly warn the senate and the country that "the worst is yet to come."

Almost in the same class with Thomas is Senator King of Utah, who is not quite so outspoken but in private conversation sees many rocks ahead for the ship of state. The pessimistic predictions of these Democratic senators sometimes find an echo upon the Republican side, but in the main the senate goes ahead, blithely, and usually a very good working majority votes down the propositions of Thomas and his fellow pessimists.

It seems that quite a number of farmers have been somewhat uneasy about the government's guaranty of $2.25 a bushel for wheat. The subject came up in the house the other day and Chairman Lever of the committee on agriculture, replying to members who said that their constituents were doubtful, said: "You can give them the absolute assurance that so far as the committee on agriculture is concerned there is a unanimous feeling that the guaranty shall be kept. I do not believe that there will be a dissenting voice in the house of representatives against that proposition." In fact there is no real disposition to prevent the guaranty from being carried out, even though it is likely to cost the government well on to two billions of dollars.

A standing army of 500,000 men is not going to be provided very easily. It will take a considerable amount of urging on the part of the administration to convince congress that an army of that size is needed. When Taft was president a proposition was made for an army of 135,000. This demand was severely criticized in congress and a great many men are still in congress who were opposed to enlargement of the standing army at that time. They say that an army of 500,000 men in peace times is not necessary, and that as there is a prospect of an international peace agreement throughout the world there is no need of building up a regular army of 500,000.

STRIP EMPEROR OF HIS WEALTH

Position of Kaiser Karl Is Painful One.

IS ATTACKED BY SOCIALISTS

Disposition of Imperial Funds to Be Decided by Austrian Parliament—Former Ruler Is Living in Castle Belonging to State, but Cannot Touch Millions—Treasury to Be Divided Among New States.

Pending an investigation by the Austrian parliament of the disposition of the imperial funds, the position of former Emperor Charles and the erstwhile imperial family continues to be a painful one, though not dangerous unless the situation should lead to disorders. In that event the family possibly may travel to Switzerland or elsewhere.

The socialist papers continue freely to attack the former emperor, archdukes and aristocracy, claiming that the latter did not do their duty during the war. There is much critical and frivolous gossip concerning the former Empress Zita.

The secret file of the old Emperor Francis Joseph is being examined. His fortune is variously estimated at from 30,000,000 to 200,000,000 crowns. According to one report the old emperor divided 60,000,000 crowns between his two daughters, Gisela and Valerie, and his granddaughter, the Princess Windischgratz. With other large sums of the imperial funds donations were made to churches, pensions and the royal poor.

Although Charles officially is the dispenser of these funds it is stated that in reality they are handled by the bank directors.

Lives in State Castle.

Ekersau castle, where the former emperor is now living, does not belong to him but is property of the state, together with other large estates and also the famous collection of jewels in Hofburg castle, among which is the Florentina diamond, called the fourth largest in the world, and also a wonderful necklace.

It is expected that this property will be distributed among the various republics of the former empire when the accounts are settled among them.

It will be necessary also to divide up the vast and wonderful treasures, the masterpieces of art, paintings, antiquities and vases centered in Vienna, formerly crown property, or in the state museum or other museums or libraries. These are believed to be worth several billions of francs.

Viennois-Glory-Tettering.

The disposal of these treasures is expected to be a difficult task and to be fraught with disaster to Vienna, since her whole future existence is believed to depend upon her ability to make herself a center of attraction for visitors, tourists, artists, architects and students of music and medicine, now that she no longer is a center of commerce and politics of a great empire which annually drew in billions of income from such sources. Friends of former Emperor Charles assert that all the sins of the Hapsburgs have been visited upon his head and that he has been blamed for all the grafting in the army, although the aristocrats declare that the grafting generals were principally those without titles. They admitted, however, there were a few exceptions in which corrupt nobility profited by the war. It is asserted by the friends of Charles that while the old emperor never was permitted to get in touch with the people Charles immediately got rid of the "old crowd" and did his best to introduce new men and to stop the war.

RECORD IN SHOE PRODUCTION

Despite Labor Troubles, the Past Year Was Banner One for Shoe Factories at Brockton.

Brockton, Mass.—Despite labor troubles, the past year was a banner one for the big shoe factories here. More than 16,000,000 pairs of shoes were manufactured and shipped to various parts of the world. The army shoe contracts, of course, helped to swell the total. The total production of shoes for the year 1918 exceeded the record of 1917 by 1,428,000 pairs. The value of the 1918 production was $85,083,220, nearly $30,000,000 greater than the value of the previous year's output.

WEAK IN AIR AT THE START

Great Britain Had but Four Squadrons of Airplanes, but Made Rapid Strides.

London.—The declaration of war by Great Britain at midnight, August 5, 1914, found the Royal Flying corps with only four squadrons in being—representing well under 100 airplanes. Three of these squadrons went instantly to France. A new squadron followed these pioneers in about ten days' time, while a fifth squadron mobilized and set out in 24 hours, reaching the fighting zone about the middle of September.

In those early days of the war machines were used simply for strategical reconnaissance. It was not until after the battle of the Alame, when settled lines of warfare were established, that artillery fire control from the air and the cruder forms of co-operation with the infantry were practiced and developed.

A RECONCILIATION

By CARRIE L. P. CURTIS.

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Situated near the little railroad station in the town of Hutton is a log cabin. This rustic little cabin is the home of Mrs. Joshua Dorr and daughter Zilpha. Mr. Dorr having died many years before. One very pleasant evening Zilpha came home from school very much downhearted. "I think it just horrid," sighed Zilpha. "I only wish she hadn't sent it to me." "Oh, dear Zilpha, Marcia will certainly understand, and if she had not sent it you would have felt much more downhearted," said Mrs. Dorr. "I am horrid, anyway," replied Zilpha.

It certainly was a shame. Marcia Phelps was to give a party next week, not merely a commonplace affair, but one much out of the ordinary. At this party Marcia would celebrate her entrance into society. Zilpha was invited and she had no clothes suitable to wear. It was hard for her to have no dress, no slippers, no gloves, and, worst of all, no money with which to buy them. When her father was alive he provided for the family very well, but since his death the frail mother had a very difficult task to provide for herself and daughter. Mrs. Dorr took in washing and sewing, and every cent that she received in return was measured and viewed upon either side before it was spent.

It was Tuesday evening; they were at tea. Mrs. Dorr gently spoke: "I have an idea, Zilpha." "I often have ideas, but they vanish as quickly as they appear," sighed Zilpha. "But, my dear, this is an idea which I think that I shall be able to perform."

When tea was finished, Mrs. Dorr asked Zilpha if she would go to the left and bring down that large, round box which had been stored away for many years. Arising from the table, she ran upstairs to find the box which her mother wished. Returning with it, Zilpha gave it to her mother. It was a large box, yellow with age, and was slightly dusty.

Zilpha stood with eyes aghast. What could be inside that box was the question which she was asking herself. Removing the cover Mrs. Dorr took out a large square package. Out of this package she took a pale pink silk cape, with a border of deeper pink. Unfolding it carefully, Mrs. Dorr, at last spoke. "You are to have a dress and all that is necessary to wear to the party." "Oh, my dear mother, where did you get it? Going, going, going to the party!" screamed Zilpha. After looking at the articles in the box, Zilpha went to bring in the wood.

On Zilpha's return from school Friday afternoon her mother had all of her clothes in readiness for her to wear at the party that evening. At six o'clock that evening Zilpha went to her room to dress for the occasion. Oh, what a scene when Zilpha spied her lovely garments prepared for her!

MARINE SERVICE
DRAWS ARMY MEN

Seek Places on the New Merchant Ships.

OFFERS FINE OPPORTUNITIES

Discharged Soldiers Have Had Taste of Seeing the World and Want More of It—War Experiences and War Unrest Lead Young Americans to Seek Broader Fields Than Satisfied Them Before.

Lure of the seven seas is drawing many of the young men recently discharged from the army, as well as others who had war jobs in industrial plants and are now idle, into the merchant marine.

War experiences and war unrest seem to have led many young Americans to seek broader fields than satisfied them before the war. They have had a taste of the world, and want more of it.

This change in the tastes of the country's youth has been of timely advantage to the United States shipping board, which is looking for thousands of young men to serve on the new merchant ships built by the government as a result of the war.

Ships of the new cargo fleets owned by the nation are being launched at the rate of two a day. Each vessel requires a crew of not less than fifty men, and the shipping board aims to make these crews as nearly as possible all-American.

To secure the men it needs for the merchant service, the shipping board began establishing its own recruiting offices in large cities after the war ended—when the average recruiting office went out of business.

Its office for the middle West was opened at 35 South Dearborn street, Chicago, in the heart of the downtown section. Young men flocked to it as soon as it was open. The office is in charge of Dr. Oliver J. Lee, director of a free school in navigation that the shipping board has maintained at Chicago since early in the war, for training deck officers.

Chance to See World.

"We offer the young man no longer satisfied with his former outlook in the world a chance to see distant countries," said Doctor Lee. "We plan to give the young sailor who enters the new merchant marine plenty of chance to improve his opportunities. His voyages will be varied so that he may see the greatest number of countries in the shortest possible time. When he has learned the business of seagoing, he will be trained as an officer. If he shows the right qualifications. Young men suited for commercial life will then be encouraged to enter exporting or importing houses, at home or abroad, for a commercial career, for which a knowledge of seagoing and of different countries is a firm foundation."

The young men signed on for sea service at the shipping board's Chicago office are sent to Boston under escort, at government expense. At the old New England seaport they are placed on ships of the United States shipping board's Atlantic training squadron for two months' special instruction as sailors, firemen, cooks or stewards. While taking this training they are paid $30 a month, and have free board and quarters. They rate as apprentices, and wear a distinctive blue uniform.

On completing the training period, the young men are shipped out in the crews of deep-sea vessels, at wages varying from $35 a month for ordinary seamen to $75 a month for firemen. They agree to remain in the merchant service at least a year.

May Seek Promotion.
At the end of the year the young men will be counted as experienced American seamen. They will be expected to seek promotion, and at the end of two years they will be qualified to study at a shipping board school for officers, which gives technical instruction in navigation or marine engineering. The engineering courses are given at the best technical colleges.

In addition to maintaining recruiting stations in the large cities, like New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, New Orleans, San Francisco and Seattle, the shipping board, by arrangement with the war department, has placed a representative at each of the army cantonments where soldiers are being discharged, to give the men information about the merchant marine.

Teach Children to Love Books.

Happy are the children of this day and age in that they have so many good books; in that if they cannot buy, they certainly can borrow from the public libraries. Here is one truth, a very simple truth, that all parents are under obligation to teach their children—that if they can learn to love books they can always forget the irritations of men and things; they can lay aside cares and still their passions; they can put their worries and disappointments to sleep.
